About the Indicators Paper

The Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD) entered into force a decade ago. It is time to orient our effort to promoting the effective implementation and monitoring of such a powerful tool for the lives of persons with disabilities!

Disability Rights Promotion International (DRPI) has worked to give voice to people with disabilities in articulating their experiences of discrimination as well as their concerns, aspirations and needs. This provides a strong account of the structural conditions of poverty and exclusion and what this means for individuals.

DRPI has created a set of evidence-based indicators which provide clear guidelines for monitoring international instruments related to persons with disabilities. These indicators aim to measure progressive realization of countries as they move toward compliance with the CRPD, other international instruments and the SDGs.

Our goal is to promote discussion on effective implementation and monitoring of all human rights treaty bodies.
